One-stop coronavirus nucleic acid test jointly conducted by Union Medical Healthcare and recognised medical testing institutions meets with overwhelming public response

(4 August 2020, Hong Kong) To help combat novel coronavirus pneumonia that ravages Hong Kong, a health management centre called re:HEALTH (re:HEALTH), which is a subsidiary of a leading integrated medical group in Hong Kong¹, Union Medical Healthcare Limited (“Union Medical Healthcare” or the “Company”, which together with its subsidiaries is referred to as the “Group”, SEHK stock code: 2138), has cooperated with medical testing institutions which are recognised by the government in conducting a one-stop novel coronavirus nucleic acid test programme at the latter’s branches all over Hong Kong Island and Kowloon. The program has met with an overwhelming response in the past few days. The huge demand has boosted the Group’s business of medical services.

Different from individual laboratories, re:HEALTH provides a novel coronavirus nucleic acid test program that is professional, comprehensive and convenient. The program includes remote medical services, deep throat saliva testing and electronic medical reports and certificates. re:HEALTH provides its services for Hong Kong citizens seamlessly through a one-stop integrated medical platform. On that online platform, registered doctors conduct remote consultations and professional medical staff assist in the testing procedures. The medical services are available in multiple options with a clearly stated price list.

Cases of novel coronavirus infection in groups are emerging one after another as the epidemic outbreak is intensifying in the community. In response to the situation, re:HEALTH offers the Hong Kong businesses discounts on the novel coronavirus nucleic acid tests for a limited period amid the fight against the epidemic. A test under the programme will cost a company HK$1,100 instead of the original price of HK$1,380.

Customers need to make bookings for the tests with the designated UMH center and then pick up specimen bottles and make payment there. They will then be provided with a link, on which they can click for the remote medical service and carry out deep throat saliva test during service hours. Customer should collect a saliva sample (the first sputum after getting up in the morning) at home and returns it to the designated laboratory before 5 p.m. on the same day and they will get a medical report by email after two to three working days. The actual time required is subject to the level of demand, which has increased rapidly recently.

Mr. Eddy Tang, Chairman, Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer of Union Medical Healthcare said, “Union Medical Healthcare is committed to becoming a leading integrated medical service provider. To align its efforts with the government’s anti-epidemic policies, Union Medical Healthcare works with recognised medical testing institutions to launch a high-quality, one-stop novel coronavirus nucleic acid test programme for a short period of time. Moreover, the Group also provides the local businesses, especially small and medium-sized enterprises, with a discount on the test as a token of a joint effort to fight against the epidemic. The Group will continue to expand its business of professional medical service. It aims to increase its share of the promising market of the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area through acquisitions, with a focus on discretionary medical and healthcare services. This will enable the Group to provide more quality medical services.”
